FROM PLAYER DEVELOPMENT CAMPS TO PROFESSIONAL HOCKEY

PWHL and NHL rosters were littered with Player Development Camp alumni during the 2023-24 season. Of the 302 American-born players to play in an NHL game this season, 205 attended a USA Hockey PDC during their youth career. On the women's side, of the 57 Americans to take part in the inaugural PWHL season, 53 participated in a PDC.

Among the USA Hockey PDC alumni is four-time Olympian and U.S. Women's National Team captain Hilary Knight. Knight, who currently plays for PWHL Boston, has fond memories of her time participating at USA Hockey Player Development Camps.

"When I was younger I tried to get to every single USA Hockey Player Development Camp," said Knight. "I remember marking the date on the calendar because I remember being so excited to have an opportunity to represent your country with the best of the best, get together, meet other girls across the United States, and have fun."

Taylor Heise, the first overall pick of the inaugural PWHL Draft to Minnesota and a fellow member of the U.S. Women's National Team, skated at Girls U18 Select Camp in 2015, 2016, and 2017. Last season, Heise went to Girls 16/17 Camp to provide some words of advice and encouragement for the players.

"Just enjoy the process. I'd go to a camp and three days would pass by in a blink of an eye," said Heise. "The biggest thing is to experience this, have fun, but also know that hockey is the main focus of this, and learn a lot."

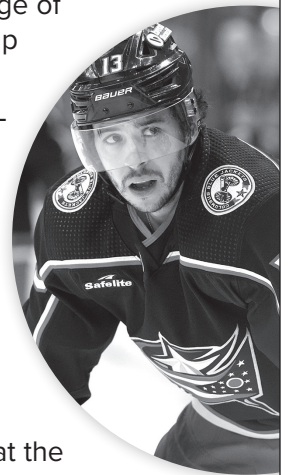

On the men's side, the impact of USA Hockey player development across all levels continues to be a difference maker. This season marked an all-time high for the percentage of American-born players making up NHL rosters at 29.5%, and over two thirds of American-born NHL players in 2023-24 were USA Hockey PDC alumni.

Among these players is Columbus Blue Jackets forward Johnny Gaudreau. Gaudreau is also currently a member of the U.S. Men's National Team, and he recently became the all-time leading scorer for the U.S. at the IIHF Men's World Championship. Before becoming a Hobey Baker winner at Boston College and an NHL All-Star, Gaudreau was a standout at the 2010 USA Hockey Boys Select 17 Camp, where he was the leading scorer with 12 points (5g, 7a) in five games.

Carolina Hurricanes forward Jake Guentzel is also a USA Hockey Player Development Camp alumni. Guentzel participated at Boys Select-17 Camp in 2011, where he impressed with eight points in five games.

A number of players who made their NHL debuts in 2023-24 honed their skills at USA Hockey Player Development Camps, including Carolina Hurricanes forward Jackson Blake, who recently made his NHL debut after wrapping up a stellar sophomore season at the University of North Dakota, where he was named a top-three finalist for the Hobey Baker Award. Blake starred at the 2019 Boys Select 16 Camp, where he was named an All-Star.

USA Hockey Player Development Camps continue to provide a unique opportunity to compete with the best players from around the country at every age group, developing elite players who go on to contribute at the professional, collegiate, and junior levels.
