PROGRAM FOCUS

The Howard Pulley Basketball program focuses on providing our players with a rich experience that centers on life skills, family/community orientation, and basketball skill development and exposure. We have developed a pathway and platform that supports the needs of today's youth and are deeply engaged in facilitating processes that assist all our athletes going forward.

We believe that this program will allow youth, particularly at-risk youth the opportunity to become better prepared in making good decisions and recognizing opportunities that life has to offer. Through a partnership with adult 'real models', professional athletes, along with cross-cultural youth connections, we believe we can and will make a difference.

The Howard Pulley program brings young people together to engage in a way that builds community; brings adults together in a way that allows them to better understand our youth; and it brings the community together to share in their success stories and achievements. This program also builds meaningful relationships that promote harmony throughout the community, which in turn translates into a true formula for success in the real game of life.

BEING THE COMPLETE STUDENT-ATHLETE

As much fun as basketball is, it is only one part of your life. Whenever it, or anything else for that matter, becomes too overly important, your whole life (yes, even your basketball game) suffers. For this reason, it is necessary to keep basketball in perspective. In other words, you need to maintain a good balance of activities and commitments in your life rather than concentrating on just one thing. Here are some additional areas of your life that are part of the balanced living equation.

Family: Your family is much, much more than your personal cheering section at your basketball games. Family activities are vital to your development as a whole person and should always come before basketball.

Spirituality: Many players find that they do not feel "whole" unless they regularly attend to their spiritual needs along with all their other needs. Some do this through prayer or meditation, while others meet these needs through a worship service or some other means. Take time during the season to make sure that you are not neglecting this portion of your life.

Academics: Keep your grades up. Do not fall behind in your homework. As you continue to play in high school or even college, you will be expected to maintain good grades.

Other extracurricular activities: If you play an instrument, are part of a choir, debate team, or in a school play, then bravo! All these activities contribute towards you becoming a complete person.
